POLITICAL SCIENCE & INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

A Guide to Reference Sources

The following bibliography has been compiled to introduce students to the reference resources of political science including international relations and to suggest useful bibliographic tools to facilitate literature searches. Since this list is limited to general reference works, readers who are interested in specific political topics or area studies are advised to search MUSE using the S= command for topics such as: TERRORISM, POLITICAL PARTIES, PARTIES, COMPARATIVE GOVERNMENT, SOCIALISM etc. The Reference collection also contains many specialized subject bibliographies on people (e.g. Marx), their ideas (e.g. Marxism) and political philosophies, concepts and systems (e.g. Communism).

Government publications are an important source of material for political science. The Government Documents Department, 2nd floor, McLennan Library has a large collection of documents including special indexes and bibliographies not covered in this guide. McGill is a depository library for the following: Canadian Federal Government, Quebec Provincial Government, the United Nations and the European Union. In addition, representative collections from the other provinces, the United States, and Great Britain as well as smaller collections from various other countries are maintained.

Machine Readable Data Files (MRDF) are made available through the collaboration of the Faculty of Arts Computer Lab (FACL), the library and the Computing Centre. Data have been acquired through McGill University's membership in the Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research (ICPSR). More detailed information can be found on InfoMcGill under Libraries: Electronic Data Resources Machine Readable Data Files. There is also an ICPSR Guide to Resources and Services (Ref Z7163 I58x) in the McLennan Reference collection.

Other bibliographic guides which may be relevant to research in political science are available at the Reference Desk: Africa, South of the Sahara; Canadian Biography; Canadian History; Canadian Politics and Government; Communism, Marxism & Socialism; Quebec Studies and Latin America.

All locations for items cited have not been indicated. If you wish to obtain additional locations, consult MUSE.
